From Classroom to Microphone

Last year, twelve-year-old Shira Levi from Haifa had a problem: she was very shy. She hated speaking in class, and her hands always shook when the teacher asked her a question. Then her English teacher gave the class a project – to record a short podcast in English.

At first, Shira wanted to say no. But she loved books, so she decided to talk about her favorite novels. She recorded the first episode in her bedroom with an old phone and a blanket over her head! Only her parents and her best friend listened to it.

Shira didn't give up. Every week, she chose a new book, wrote her notes and practiced before she pressed "record". Slowly, more students began to listen. Now her podcast, Between the Pages, has more than 3,000 listeners from twelve countries.

"The microphone doesn't scare me anymore," Shira says. "I still feel nervous sometimes, but I know that people are waiting for the next episode." Her advice for other teens is simple: "Start small. Your first episode won't be perfect, and that's OK."

True or false? Write T or F.

☐ 1. Shira was shy before she started the podcast.

☐ 2. Shira recorded her first episode in a studio.

☐ 3. Her first listeners were her parents and her best friend.

☐ 4. Today, Shira never feels nervous.

5 Why did Shira decide to talk about books?

_____

6 How many listeners does the podcast have now? _____

7 Find a phrase in the text that means "didn't stop trying": _____
